Trademark Opposition and Cancellation Proceedings: Compulsory Counterclaims

37 CFR Part 2

AGENCY: Patent and Trademark Office (PTO), Department of Commerce.

ACTION: Final rule.

SUMMARY: This amendment of the rules of practice in trademark cases provides explicitly for compulsory counterclaims under stated conditions in opposition and cancellation proceedings before the Trademark Trial and Appeal Board in the Patent and Trademark Office. The amendment establishes the authority for a pre-existing practice which has been held on judicial review to be unauthorized by the existing rules.

EFFECTIVE DATE: April 1, 1981.

FOR FURTHER INFORMATION CONTACT: David J. Kera, Member, Trademark Trial and Appeal Board, Commissioner of Patents and Trademarks, Washington, D.C. 20231. (703) 557-3551.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION: On Apr. 16, 1979, notice was given in the Federal Register (44 FR 22478) of a proposal to amend two sections of Title 37 of the Code of Federal Regulations relating to trademark opposition and cancellation proceedings. Interested persons were invited to comment on the proposal by May 15, 1979. Twenty-six written letters and statements were submitted. Careful consideration has been given to all comments received, and the proposal is being adopted with certain changes.

The regulations adopted involve both sections that were proposed to be revised, amended or added—namely, §§ 2.106 and 2.114.

This amendment has been reviewed pursuant to Executive Order 12044 and found to have no major economic consequences and therefore does not require a regulatory analysis.

The text of the rules will be reproduced in the Patent and Trademark Office Official Gazette in about two months with additions indicated by arrows and deletions indicated by brackets to help readers identify the changes. The letters and written statements received and a summary and analysis of the comments are available for public inspection in Room 11E10, Crystal Plaza, Building 3, 2021 Jefferson Davis Highway, Arlington, Va.

PURPOSE OF RULES

The purpose of the rules that are being adopted is to make it compulsory for a defendant to file a counterclaim for the cancellation of the registration pleaded by the plaintiff in an opposition or cancellation proceeding if the defendant wants to challenge the validity of the plaintiff's registration and if the grounds for a counterclaim exist when the answer to the notice of opposition or petition for cancellation is filed. When a defendant in an opposition or cancellation proceeding desires to eliminate the plaintiff's registration as a ground upon which the opposition or cancellation is based, a petition by the defendant to cancel the plaintiff's registration is mandatory because the validity of the plaintiff's registration cannot be questioned so long as it remains uncancelled.[1]

The effect of the rules is that if a counterclaim is not filed as provided by the rules, the applicant or respondent will thereafter be barred from seeking to cancel the registration pleaded by the opposer or cancellation petitioner in the prior proceeding on any ground which existed at the time when the answer was filed.

The rules that are being adopted avoid piecemeal litigation of a multiplicity of actions and counteractions relating to a single conflict or controversy. For instance, when the issue is likelihood of confusion and a question is raised whether the plaintiff's registration should remain on the register or should be cancelled, that question must be decided before there can be a determination of the issue whether the defendant's mark involved in an opposition proceeding should be registered or whether the defendant's registration involved in a cancellation proceeding should be cancelled.[2] To permit a defendant to litigate a first case to a decision, which by hypothesis the plaintiff would win, and thereafter permit the defendant to petition for the cancellation of the plaintiff's registration, would allow a proliferation of proceedings and would meanwhile result in the first plaintiff's registration remaining on the register when it might be an improper registration. If the party which was the defendant in the first case should win the second case and thereafter file a new application to register its mark, there would have been a substantial period of time when the register would not have reflected the true rights of the parties. This situation would be detrimental to the public, which searches the register and relies upon the rights recorded there when deciding upon the availability of new marks for adoption and use.[3] Since a claim of invalidity of a registration of a mark is logically related to the issue of enforceability of the registration in an opposition or cancellation proceeding, the consolidation in one proceeding of all claims determinable by the Patent and Trademark Office arising out of a particular conflict will avoid unnecessary delays and unnecessary proliferation of proceedings to decide what is a single controversy. By adopting the rules, the Office is taking steps to have the pleadings of the parties present the entire controversy at one time and to have discovery, trial, final briefs and oral argument in one proceeding instead of several. Both the parties and the public will benefit from the more efficient procedure established by the rules being adopted.

COMPULSORY COUNTERCLAIMS

Amended §§ 2.106(b) and 2.114(b) provide that an answer may contain any defense, including the affirmative defenses of unclean hands, laches, estoppel, acquiescense, fraud, mistake or prior judgment. When pleading special matters, the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure are to be followed. A reply to an affirmative defense need not be filed. However, a defense attacking the validity of any one or more of the registrations pleaded in the opposition or petition for cancellation is a compulsory counterclaim if grounds for such counterclaim exist at the time when the answer is filed. If grounds for a counterclaim are known to the applicant or respondent when the answer to the opposition or petition is filed, the counterclaim must be pleaded with or as part of the answer. If grounds for a counterclaim are learned during the course of the opposition or cancellation proceeding, the counterclaim must be pleaded promptly after the grounds therefor are learned. A counterclaim need not be filed, however, if it is the subject of another proceeding between the same parties or anyone in privity therewith.

Amended §§ 2.106(b) and 2.114(b) further provide that an attack on the validity of a registration pleaded by an opposer or petitioner will not be heard unless a counterclaim or separate proceeding is filed to seek the cancellation of such registration. A pleaded registration is a registration identified by number and date of issuance in an original notice of opposition or petition for cancellation, or in any amendment thereto made under Rule 15, FRCP. The provisions of §§ 2.111 through 2.115, inclusive, are applicable to counterclaims and a time, not less than thirty days, will be designated within which an answer to a counterclaim must be filed. Upon motion by a party, the times for pleading, discovery, testimony, briefs or oral argument will be reset or extended when necessary to enable a party fully to present or meet a counterclaim or separate petition for cancellation of a registration.

In response to some of the comments, §§ 2.106(b)(1) and 2.114(b)(1) have been changed by the inclusion of a sentence to make it clear that they are applicable only when a

Corp. v. J. Strickland & Co.*, 160 USPQ 715 (CCPA 1969), where, in an analogous situation, the Court said that the Board had taken the proper approach in first determining a cancellation petition by the plaintiff against the defendant's existing registration and then, after dismissing petition for cancellation, dismissed the opposition by the plaintiff against an application by the defendant for the registration of substantially the same mark for the same goods. The Court indicated that the issues in the cancellation had to be decided first because they were controlling.

pleaded registration is identified by number and date of issuance in an original or amended notice of opposition or petition for cancellation. Since a party may not rely on a proceeding being prosecuted by a stranger, §§ 2.106(b)(2)(i) and 2.114(b)(2)(i) have been modified from the version published for comment so as to state explicitly that the separate proceeding for the cancellation of an opposer's or cancellation petitioner's registration which would obviate the need for a counterclaim must be between the same parties or anyone in privity therewith. It should be noted that the Trademark Trial and Appeal Board has control over its docket so that a case may be suspended at the request of a party when a separate proceeding in a more advanced stage may render a case moot, thereby avoiding unnecessary litigation.

Two comments stated that there is no basis in the Trademark Act for the compulsory counterclaim rules in amended §§ 2.106(b)(2) and 2.114(b)(2). Several related comments were to the effect that these sections would operate to bar a claim against a plaintiff's registration prior to the time when such a claim would be barred by section 14 of the Act.

Initially, it should be noted that the presence of Rule 13(a) in the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure shows that there is no constitutional impediment to a compulsory counterclaim rule of procedure. Moreover, it is considered to be within the power of the Commissioner of Patents and Trademarks to adopt compulsory counterclaim rules, which are not inconsistent with any provision of the Trademark Act, as part of the rules and regulations for the conduct of proceedings in the Patent and Trademark Office, as authorized by section 41 of the Trademark Act.

Courts have long recognized that a compulsory counterclaim rule operates to compel a party to raise a claim at a time chosen by its opponent.[4] This necessarily means that a party may be compelled to raise a claim, or to lose it, long prior to the time when a statute of limitations would absolutely bar the claim. Sections 14 (a) and (b) of the Trademark Act have been interpreted as a statute of limitations barring claims against certain registrations on particular grounds more than five years after a specified event (the issuance or republication of a registration under the Trademark Act of 1946) has occurred.[5]

As there is nothing inconsistent between a statute of limitations and a compulsory counterclaim rule, so there is nothing inconsistent between a statutory cause of action for which there is no statute of limitations (sections 14(c), (d), and (e) of the Trademark Act) and a compulsory counterclaim rule insofar as there is a particular controversy involving particular marks and specified goods or services. The effect of amended §§ 2.106(b) and 2.114(b) is simply to require the timely assertion of a claim, if one exists, under sections 14(c), (d), and (e) of the Trademark Act. If a plaintiff's registration is invalid, it is to the benefit of the public as well as to the defendant to have it promptly removed from the register, and it is to the advantage of the parties and the board to have the issue litigated in one case rather than in a protracted series of cases. Since there is no provision of the Trademark Act with which the compulsory counterclaim rules are inconsistent and the rules are for the conduct of proceedings under the Trademark Act, it is concluded that the Commissioner possesses the statutory authority under section 41 of the Trademark Act to adopt the rules.

Although one comment stated that amended §§ 2.106(b)(2)(i) and 2.114(b)(2)(i) are broader than the compulsory counterclaim rule of Rule 13(a), FRCP, it is the position of the Patent and Trademark Office that amended §§ 2.106(b)(2)(i) and 2.114(b)(2)(i) comport with the practice on compulsory counterclaims announced and followed by the Federal Courts in applying Rule 13(a), FRCP.[6] Assuming that the comment is meant to point out that the plaintiff's right to prevent or cancel a registration and the defendant's right to obtain or retain a registration do not arise out of the "transaction or occurrence that is the subject matter of the opposing party's claim" (the language in Rule 13(a), FRCP), the answer is that an inter partes proceeding before the Board is sui generis and the continued existence or not of the plaintiff's registration is inextricably involved in the determination of the defendant's right to obtain or to maintain a registration when the issue is likelihood of confusion.

The occasion for a counterclaim will typically arise in practice only when an opposer or a cancellation petitioner seeks to prevent or to cancel a registration of an applicant or a respondent on the ground that the defendant's mark is likely to cause confusion or mistake or to deceive within the meaning of section 2(d) of the Trademark Act. Certainly the defense that a registration pleaded by an opposer or cancellation petitioner is invalid and therefore cannot support the pleaded claim of damage is, at the very least, an offshoot of the same basic controversy between the parties and is the essence of an affirmative defense. By virtue of section 2(d), the plaintiff's registration and the defendant's entitlement to a registration are parts of the same transaction, i.e., the process of deciding whether the defendant has a right to obtain or retain a registration.[7]

The same analysis responds to the five comments that the first action and a counterclaim are not intimately related or do not arise out of the same factual situation. A pleaded registration is a substantive part of the evidentiary case on behalf of an opposer or cancellation petitioner who is prosecuting a proceeding based upon likelihood of confusion since, in an opposition, it must be considered regardless of the parties' dates of use and, in a cancellation, is evidence of continuous use since the filing date of the application which issued into the registration. An attack on the validity of the pleaded registration, which must be by means of a counterclaim or petition for cancellation, is thus a related branch of the same basic controversy, and, as such, it is properly a compulsory counterclaim. Furthermore, if the counterclaim or petition for cancellation is presented on allegations of likelihood of confusion and priority of use, as is often the situation, the same factual and legal issues are present in both the opposer's or cancellation petitioner's case and the applicant's or respondent's case; a fortiori, a counterclaim is properly compulsory. To argue from a defendant's side that it is involuntarily involved does not justify not having to prosecute a counterclaim if grounds for it exist. A person accused of trademark infringement in an action in a District Court is just as involuntarily involved and it would be anomalous if claim against the plaintiff's registration in such a proceeding were not considered a compulsory counterclaim.

What has been said above answers the comment that there is no judicial economy in a compulsory counterclaim rule. Without such a rule the following sequence of events could take place. An opposer could rely on a registration; the applicant could take no testimony, and the opposition would be decided in favor of the opposer. The applicant could then petition for cancellation of the opposer's registration on the ground of prior use. A defense of collateral estoppel raised by the initial opposer on the issue of priority would be met by the applicant with the argument that proof of priority of use in the opposition would have been irrelevant, citing King Candy Co. v. Eunice King's Kitchen, Inc., supra, n. 2, and therefore was not necessary to the determination of the opposition. A second proceeding would thus be litigated. Assuming applicant prevailed, presumably a second application would be filed. Thus the Office would have had to deal with two contested proceedings and two applications to determine rights that could have been ascertained on the basis of one application and one proceeding. An opposer which thought it had prevailed would discover that it had won a Pyrrhic—even a phantom—victory, and the register would have incorrectly reflected the rights of the parties, to the detriment of the public, for an extended period of time. To contend, in these circumstances, that the rule would not result in judicial, examining and public economy is to miss the point entirely.

Several comments stated that even under amended §§ 2.106 (b) and 2.114(b), the Board cannot settle all of the potential issues between the parties because matters of infringement and unfair competition are for the courts to decide. It should be pointed out that the rules being adopted are designed to settle in one proceeding all of the issues determinable within the Patent and Trademark Office, arising from a particularized controversy involving specified marks and goods or services, which are ripe for litigation and adjudication. Obviously, issues outside the jurisdiction of the Board cannot be determined.

Amended §§ 2.106(b) and 2.114(b) do not impose a new and untried practice on the Trademark Trial and Appeal Board. On the contrary, a compulsory counterclaim rule was in effect and worked well from the date of the decision in Outdoor Sports Industries, Inc. v. The Joseph & Feiss Co., 177 USPQ 535 (TTAB 1973), petition denied, 177 USPQ 533 (Comm'r. Pats 1973) to the date of the decision in Endo Laboratories, Inc. v. Fredericks, 197 USPQ 560 (TTAB 1977).[8] No objection to the practice from any source came to the Board's attention and no appeal from a decision applying the practice was prosecuted to an appellate decision except for Thuron Industres, Inc. v. The Conrad-Pyle Co., 198 USPQ 403 (CCPA 1978), where the Court held that Rule 13(a), FRCP, did not support the Board's practice and that § 2.106(b), as then written, was a permissive rather than a mandatory rule. Nevertheless, during the five-year period in which a compulsory counterclaim practice was in effect, the Board did not experience any undue difficulty in discovery or motion practice, did not observe any unusual increase in the number of counterclaims that were filed and did not find that proceedings were made longer or more complicated by reason of the counterclaim practice. On the contrary, the Board's experience showed that the compulsory counterclaim practice resulted in a net saving of time and resources, thereby enabling the Board to function more efficiently and to serve the public interest more effectively.

Several comments stated that the compulsory counterclaim rules will provoke unnecessary conflicts or will make settlements more difficult to achieve. It is considered very unlikely that provisions for compulsory counterclaims will stimulate needless conflicts (by definition, a conflict exists before a counterclaim would be filed) or hamper attempts to reach a settlement. When parties have conflicting claims against each other, it is believed that both would have reason to explore the possibility of an amicable settlement which would obviate the need for litigation. However, in response to a suggestion received, it is considered inadvisable to quote or refer to the compulsory counterclaim rules in the Office letter notifying an applicant of an opposition or a respondent of a cancellation proceeding because that might be misinterpreted as a direction to file a counterclaim in every proceeding.

A few comments questioned the effect of amended §§ 2.106(b) and 2.114(b) on subsequent court litigation between the parties. These sections apply only to proceedings before the Trademark Trial and Appeal Board; they do not and could not affect the powers over registrations conferred upon the Federal Courts by section 37 of the Trademark Act. The Patent and Trademark Office cannot, of course, speculate on how courts may apply the doctrine of estoppel to claims which might have been, but were not, litigated in the Office. This and other questions remain to be answered by the evolution of case law after the amended rules become effective.

It is expected that in the original notice of opposition or petition for cancellation, an opposer or cancellation petitioner will identify by number and date of issuance each registration upon which it expects to rely. The deliberate withholding, until the testimony period of an opposer or cancellation petitioner, of the identification of the registration or registrations intended to be introduced in evidence in support of the claim of damage causes unwarranted surprise and prejudice to an applicant or respondent. Such a practice frustrates proper discovery and preparation for trial. The burden is upon an opposer or cancellation petitioner to present initially a pleading that gives fair notice of the case that an applicant or respondent must meet. The Federal Rules of Civil Procedure reject the approach that pleading is a game of skill.[9]

The Patent and Trademark Office recognizes that situations will arise where an opposer or cancellation petitioner will want to introduce a registration which was not originally pleaded. This may be done by a motion to amend the pleadings under Rule 15, FRCP, to add one or more registrations. When they are pleaded by number and date of issuance, amended §§ 2.106(b) and 2.114(b) will then apply to any added registration. It should be remembered that a long and unexplained delay in the filing of a motion to amend a notice of opposition or petition for cancellation, when there is no question of newly discovered evidence (as there would not be when a party is pleading its own registration), may render the amendment untimely if the defendant is thereby prejudiced.[10] It therefore behooves an opposer or cancellation petitioner to plead its registration by number and date of issuance, if not in the original notice of opposition or petition for cancellation, as soon as possible after the omission (or newly issued registration) comes to the opposer's or cancellation petitioner's attention. Amended §§ 2.106(b)(2)(iv) and 2.114(b)(2)(iv) provide sufficient flexibility to allow an applicant or respondent fair and adequate opportunity to plead, take discovery, and present evidence on a counterclaim on any available ground when an opposer or cancellation petitioner pleads a registration in an amended notice of opposition or petition for cancellation.

An opposer or cancellation petitioner may withdraw without prejudice a notice of opposition or a petition for cancellation before an answer is filed. See §§ 2.106(c) and 2.114(c). One comment inquired what would happen if the defendant failed to file an answer. When an applicant or respondent elects not to answer, the opposition or cancellation is decided as in a case of default. See §§ 2.106(a) and 2.114(a). If no answer of any kind is filed, there can be no counterclaim, which is, by definition, a pleading within an answer. If a party is willing to lose by default, there is a very high probability that there is no interest in the mark, at least for the goods or services identified in the application being opposed or in the registration sought to be cancelled.

One comment expressed concern that the premature destruction of the records of proceedings in the Patent and [8] During this period, the following cases applied the compulsory counterclaim rule then in effect: Textron, Inc. v. The Gillette Co., 180 USPQ 152 (TTAB 1973); Kaffia v. Walter Kidde & Co., 185 USPQ 436 (TTAB 1975); Delta Tire Corp. v. Sports Car Club of America, Inc., 185 USPQ 443 (TTAB 1975); and *Scovill Mfg. Trademark Office might impede or prevent a party from rebutting a contention that a compulsory counterclaim was not filed. There should be no apprehension that the destruction or loss of Office records would interfere with a just application of amended §§ 2.106(b) and 2.114(b). Every paper in every proceeding is either filed by or served upon every party. See §§ 2.105, 2.113 and 2.119(a). In every case, the decision or an order terminating the proceeding is served on every party through counsel or directly when there is no counsel. Thus, every party to a proceeding will have a complete record of the pleadings and the decision or order terminating a proceeding for future use as needed.

Several comments raised the question of the effect of amended §§ 2.106(b)(2)(i) and 2.114(b)(2)(i) in situations where the grounds for a counterclaim exist but are not known to a defendant. Several related comments indicated a lack of understanding of the difference between the existence of grounds for a counterclaim and knowledge of those grounds by a defendant. One comment stated that the author agreed with the proposed rules if they were limited to grounds the defendant knew or had reason to know, and one comment stated that the proposed rules should limit compulsory counterclaims to certain causes of action, e.g., likelihood of confusion combined with priority of use. Another comment was in favor of the adoption of the proposed rules provided that a counterclaim could be pleaded in an amended answer.

A distinction is made in amended §§ 2.106(b)(2)(i) and 2.114(b)(2)(i) between the time when a cause of action giving rise to a counterclaim must have matured for a counterclaim to be compulsory and the time when the counterclaim be pleaded. The cause of action must have matured by the date of filing of the answer to the notice of opposition or petition for cancellation in order for the counterclaim to be compulsory in that proceeding. Rule 13(a), FRCP, provides that "A pleading shall state as a counterclaim any claim which at the time of serving the pleading the pleader has against any opposing party * * *" (emphasis added). This indicates that there should be a date which sets a limit so that if a claim matures thereafter it is not a compulsory counterclaim. The date of filing of the answer seems to be, in the context of proceedings before the Board, a fair limiting date. Thus, if a cause of action, such as abandonment,[11] does not exist until after the date of the answer, it is not a compulsory counterclaim. That is, if the cause of action for the cancellation of the plaintiff's pleaded registration has not matured by the date of filing of the answer, the filing of a counterclaim is permissive rather than mandatory.

It is recognized that the grounds for a counterclaim may remain unknown until after the initial answer is filed. In certain situations the defendant will usually know the grounds, or at least have knowledge upon which a counterclaim could be pleaded in good faith on information and belief, before the answer is filed. These grounds include likelihood of confusion combined with priority of use, or mere descriptiveness of the plaintiff's alleged mark, or that the plaintiff's alleged mark is the common descriptive name of a product or service. In other situations, the grounds for a counterclaim may be learned by means of discovery or, in some instances, as a result of an opposer's or cancellation petitioner's evidence. Examples of such grounds are abandonment and, rarely, fraud. In the absence of a separate petition for cancellation previously filed by a party or anyone in privity therewith, the counterclaim must be filed as part of the answer (which means that the answer must be verified and the proper cancellation fee paid) if the grounds are known when the answer is filed. If grounds for cancellation are learned after the answer is filed, the counterclaim must be filed promptly (which is a flexible standard) after the grounds are learned if it is to be asserted. The counterclaim which is added by an amendment to the answer must be verified and accompanied by the proper fee. As amended §§ 2.106(b)(2)(i) and 2.114(b)(2)(i) make clear, any answer may be seasonably amended to plead a counterclaim when the grounds are learned after the original answer is filed.

A number of comments expressed concern that the rules will mandate or encourage speculative counterclaims which the defendant would hope to support by information learned through discovery. A related comment was that proceedings would become complicated and there would be no saving in time or expense. Several comments indicated that an applicant desiring a decision only on the single issue of the registrability of its mark would feel compelled to file a counterclaim.

An applicant or respondent is under an obligation to learn by discovery whether suspected possible grounds for a counterclaim in fact exist if it wants to be sure of the opportunity to file a counterclaim when the grounds existed as of the date of filing the answer. The amount of discovery required to learn of the possible existence of grounds for a counterclaim is not onerous, at least up to the point where an informed decision may be made whether or not to pursue the issue. However, speculative counterclaims should not be filed. Section 2.15 states that the signature of an attorney at law or other person representing a party to a proceeding to a paper filed by him, or the filing of any paper by him, constitutes a certificate that the paper has been read; that its filing is authorized; that to the best of his knowledge, information and belief there is good ground to support it; and that it is not interposed for delay. Rule 11, FRCP, contains language to the same effect and further provides that a pleading signed with intent to defeat the purpose of the rule may be stricken as sham and false.

An applicant or respondent is never under an absolute obligation to plead a counterclaim. If an applicant or respondent desires to have a proceeding which will determine only whether the applicant's or respondent's mark is likely to cause confusion, mistake or deception, the applicant or respondent may refrain from filing a counterclaim (assuming, of course, that there is a choice because the factual basis for a counterclaim is present). The effect of omitting a counterclaim for which the grounds exist will be that the applicant or respondent, after the case is terminated will thereafter be barred from petitioning to cancel the registration pleaderd by the opposer or cancellation petitioner (i.e., the registration identified by number and date of issue in an original notice of opposition or petition for cancellation) on any ground that had matured when the original answer was filed in the first proceedings. This bar will be effective, however, only insofar as a second proceeding between the parties would involve the same mark and the same goods or services of the party (applicant or respondent in the first proceedings) as were the subject of the first proceeding.

Several comments raised the question of the effect of amended §§ 2.106(b) and 2.114(b) when there was no reason for the applicant or respondent to file a counterclaim in the first proceeding because there clearly was no likelihood of confusion, but a later application or registration by the same applicant or respondent, for a specifically different mark or for the same mark but different goods or services, presented a much closer question, and the applicant or respondent, when again met with an opposition or petition for cancellation by the same party relying upon the same registration as had been pleaded in the prior proceeding, would want to counterclaim for cancellation. As indicated previously, the rules that are being adopted have the objective of avoiding a relitigation of issues that could have been determined in a single proceeding. The intent of amended §§ 2.106(b) and 2.114(b) is to bar a later petition for cancellation of the pleaded registration only when the same conflict or controversy is sought to be relitigated. Thus, if a second proceeding concerns a mark or a description of goods or services different from those of the applicant or respondent in the first proceeding, other than trivial, frivolous or immaterial changes, different issues are presented, the controversy is different, and the compulsory counterclaim rules would have no application; in this situation a petition or counterclaim for cancellation of the opposer's or cancellation petitioner's pleaded registration in a new proceeding would not be barred

The situations where the compulsory counterclaim rules in amended §§ 2.106(b) and 2.114(b) are most likely to be invoked are those in which a cause of action for the cancellation of an opposer's or cancellation petitioner's registration arises from events or facts which have been concluded or fixed at a time which has passed. When a cause of action arises from a continuing state of facts, e.g., abandonment as a result of nonuse of a mark, or licensing without adequate control, or because a word has become a common descriptive name, it is conceivable that the compulsory counterclaim rules that are being adopted will be applicable very infrequently or not at all.

One comment stated that an applicant or respondent cannot properly plead damage from an opposer's or cancellation petitioner's registration until the Trademark Trial and Appeal Board or a court "reverses" the examiner's "holding" that a mark, as applied to its goods or services, does not so resemble a previously registered mark as to be likely to cause confusion. This comment misconstrued the decision in Hyde Park Footwear Co., Inc. v. Hampshire Designers, Inc., 197 USPQ 639 (TTAB 1977). An applicant or respondent may consider itself to be damaged by the registration of an opposer's or cancellation petitioner's mark, and is therefore entitled to present evidence and to be heard, notwithstanding that the examiner, with only an application and a prior registration to consider, may have been of the opinion that confusion is unlikely. There is no requirement, and it would be unreasonable to impose one, that an applicant or respondent must await an unfavorable decision of the Board in an opposition or cancellation proceeding (thereby "reversing" the examiner) before the applicant or respondent could assert a likelihood of confusion as a basis for the standing necessary for a cancellation petition against an opposer's or petitioner's registration. Where a party can demonstrate a real interest in the proceeding, is has standing to petition for cancellation.[13]

Another comment suggested that the fee payable in connection with a cancellation be $25 regardless of the number of registrations sought to be cancelled by the counterclaimant. Section 31(a)(5) of the Trademark Act requires a fee of $25 on filing a petition for cancellation for each class. Since section 41 of the Trademark Act specifies that the rules and regulations promulgated by the Commissioner be not inconsistent with law, a single fee of $25 irrespective of the number of registrations or classes for which cancellation is sought cannot be established. However, as a practical matter, the fee for cancellation is usually a very small percentage of the total cost incurred. Even in the extremely rare case involving numerous pleaded registrations, the antagonists are generally prepared to expend a considerable sum to settle a wide-ranging dispute, and again the fee is a small percentage of the total expense. Thus, the statutory fee is not considered to be a reason not to adopt the compulsory counterclaim rules.

Amended §§ 2.106(b) and 2.114(b) are not applicable to concurrent use proceedings. In such proceedings, the applicant is the nominal plaintiff and only its concurrent use application is involved, so there is no registration against which the named excepted user (the nominal defendant in the proceeding) could counterclaim.

One comment suggested a rule change which was more extensive than the published proposal. After careful consideration, it was decided not to make the rules that are being adopted applicable to concurrent use proceedings or to interference proceedings. When a concurrent use applicant specifies another's application or registration as an exception to the applicant's right of exclusive use, the other party's application or registration is made a part of the concurrent use proceeding and the excepted applicant or registrant is made a party to the proceeding. See §§ 2.42 and 2.99. At the conclusion of the proceeding conducted by the Trademark Trial and Appeal Board pursuant to section 17 of the Trademark Act, the Commissioner may restrict the registration of a registered mark and may register the mark or marks for the person or persons entitled thereto, as the rights of the parties are established in the proceeding. See section 18 of the Trademark Act. Prior to the institution of a concurrent use proceeding, which is between or among the concurrent use applicant or applicants and persons named as excepted users, which include applicants and registrants specified as excepted users, a concurrent use application is published for opposition under section 12(a) of the Trademark Act. Upon publication under section 12(a), any person, including a person named in the application as an excepted user, who believes he may be damaged may file a notice of opposition.

If the opposition to a concurrent use application is prosecuted to a decision, the rights of the parties, including any rights determinable on a counterclaim under amended § 2.106 (b), may be decided there. If the rights of the parties are determined in the concurrent use proceeding, section 18 of the Trademark Act authorizes the Commissioner to restrict an applicant's or an excepted user's application or registration in accordance with the findings and conclusions of the Board. Hence, there is no need to extend the compulsory counterclaim rules to concurrent use proceedings.

[13] See Federated Foods, Inc. v. Fort Howard Paper Co., 192 USPQ 24 (CCPA 1976); and Golomb v. Wadsworth, 201 USPQ 200 (CCPA 1979).

Interferences are declared only by the Commissioner and only upon petition showing extraordinary circumstances which would result in a party's being unduly prejudiced without an interference. See § 2.91(a). In practice, an interference is declared only when there are more than two pending applications for substantially the same mark for substantially the same goods or services and the applicant claiming the earliest date of first use is the junior applicant so that he would have to file and prosecute two or more oppositions successfully before his mark could be published for opposition. Since only applications are involved, there is no need for a compulsory counterclaim rule in interference proceedings. All of the rights of the parties will be determined in the interference proceeding.

TEXT OF RULES ADOPTED

After consideration of the comments received and pursuant to the authority contained in section 1123 of Title 15 of the United States Code and section 6 of Title 35 of the United States Code, Part 2 of Title 37 of the Code of Federal Regulations is amended as set forth below.

1. In § 2.106 paragraph (b) is revised to read as follows:

§ 2.106 Answer

* * * * *

(b)(1) An answer may contain any defense, including the affirmative defenses of unclean hands, laches, estoppel, acquiescence, fraud, mistake, or prior judgment. When pleading special matters, the Federal Rules of Civil Procedures shall be followed. A reply to an affirmative defense need not be filed. When a defense attacks the validity of a registration pleaded in the opposition, paragraph (b)(2) of this section shall govern. A pleaded registration is a registration identified by number and date of issuance in an original notice of opposition or in any amendment thereto made under Rule 15, FRCP.

(2)(i) A defense attacking the validity of any one or more of the registrations pleaded in the opposition shall be a compulsory counterclaim if grounds for such counterclaim exists at the time when the answer is filed. If grounds for a counterclaim are known to the applicant when the answer to the opposition is filed, the counterclaim shall, be pleaded with or as part of the answer. If grounds for a counterclaim are learned during the course of the opposition proceeding, the counterclaim shall be pleaded promptly after the grounds therefor are learned. A counterclaim need not be filed if it is the subject of another proceeding between the same parties or anyone in privity therewith.

(ii) An attack on the validity of a registration pleaded by an opposer will not be heard unless a counterclaim or separate petition is filed to seek the cancellation of such registration.

(iii) The provisions of §§ 2.111 through 2.115, inclusive, shall be applicable to counterclaims. A time, not less than thirty days, will be designated within which an answer to the counterclaim must be filed.

(iv) The times for pleading discovery, testimony, briefs or oral argument will be reset or extended when necessary, upon motion by a party, to enable a party fully to present or meet a counterclaim or separate petition for cancellation of a registration.

2. In § 2.114 paragraph (b) is revised to read as follows:

§ 2.114 Answer

* * * * *

(b)(1) An answer may contain any defense, including the affirmative defenses of unclean hands, laches, estoppel, acquiescence, fraud, mistake, or prior judgment. When pleading special matters, the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure shall be followed. A reply to an affirmative defense need not be filed. When a defense attacks the validity of a registration pleaded in the petition, paragraph (b)(2) of this section shall govern. A pleaded registration is a registration identified by number and date of issuance in an original petition for cancellation or in any amendment thereto made under Rule 15, FRCP.

(2)(i) A defense attacking the validity of any one or more of the registrations pleaded in the petition shall be a compulsory counterclaim if grounds for such counterclaim exist at the time when the answer is filed. If grounds for a counterclaim are known to respondent when the answer to the petition is filed, the counterclaim shall be pleaded with or as a part of the answer. If grounds for a counterclaim are learned during the course of the cancellation proceeding, the counterclaim shall be pleaded promptly after the grounds therefor are learned. A counterclaim need not be filed if it is the subject of another proceeding between the same parties or anyone in privity therewith.

(ii) An attack on the validity of a registration pleaded by a petitioner for cancellation will not be heard unless a counterclaim or separate petition if filed to seek the cancellation of such registration.

(iii) The provisions of §§ 2.111 through 2.115, inclusive, shall be applicable to counterclaims. A time, not less than thirty days, will be designated within which an answer to the counterclaim must be filed.

(iv) The times for pleading, discovery, testimony, briefs, or oral argument will be reset or extended when necessary, upon motion by a party, to enable a party fully to present or meet a counterclaim or separate petition for cancellation of a registration.

Flow Diagrams of Proposed Procedures for Reexamination and Inter Partes Protest Proceedings

The purpose of this notice is to provide interested persons with a broad overview of the provisions of the proposed rule changes relating to reexamination and inter partes protest proceedings. The flow diagrams below serve to summarize the general provisions of the proposed changes which were published in the Federal Register on Jan. 13, 1981 (46 Fed. Reg. 3162–3175), and in the OFFICIAL GAZETTE on Feb. 17, 1981 (1003 O.G. 36). Public Law 96–517, providing the statutory authority for reexamination of patents, was published in the OFFICIAL GAZETTE on Feb. 3, 1981 (1003 O.G. 7–21).

Interested persons are reminded that comments must be submitted on or before Apr. 16, 1981; public hearing, Apr. 16, 1981, 9:30 a.m. Requests to present oral testimony should be received on or before Apr. 9, 1981. The hearing will be held in Room 11C24 of Building 3, Crystal Plaza, located at 2021 Jefferson Davis Highway, Arlington, Va. Written comments and requests to present oral testimony should be addressed to the Commissioner of Patents and Trademarks, Washington, D.C. 20231.

Date

Extension of Time for Filing Notices of Opposition

By means of an Official Gazette Notice dated January 22, 1981, the Patent and Trademark Office announced that (1) the automatic 14-day extension of filing Notices of Opposition to registration of marks published in the Official Gazettes dated May 20, 1980 thru December 30, 1980 would not be continued into calendar year 1981 and (2) extensions would be granted, as necessary, only on an issue-by-issue basis.

Continued difficulties with printing and mailing of the Official Gazette have made advisable a modification of the policy announced in the Notice dated January 22, 1981 and the reinstatement of the automatic 14-day extension. Therefore, beginning with the Official Gazette issue dated January 13, 1981, a Notice of Opposition to registration of any mark appearing in the Official Gazette will be considered timely if filed within 44 days after the date on the cover of the Official Gazette in which the mark appears.

This Notice will be printed in each succeeding issue of the Official Gazette, and the announced 14-day extension will continue to apply unless specifically terminated or modified by subsequent Notice.

MARKS PUBLISHED FOR OPPOSITION

The following marks are published in compliance with section 12(a) of the Trademark Act of 1946. Applications for the registration of marks in more than one class have been filed as provided in section 30 of said act as amended by Public Law 772, 87th Congress, approved Oct. 9, 1962, 76 Stat. 769. Opposition under section 13 may be filed within thirty days of the date of this publication. See Rules 2.101 to 2.105.

A separate fee of twenty-five dollars for opposing each mark in each class must accompany the opposition.

SECTION 1.—INTERNATIONAL CLASSIFICATION

The short titles associated below with the international class numbers are terms designed merely for quick identification and are not an official part of the international classification. The full names of international classes are given in section 6.1 of the trademark rules of practice.

The designation "U.S. Cl." appearing in this section refers to the U.S. class in effect prior to Sep. 1, 1973 rather than the international class which applies to applications filed on or after that date. For adoption of international classification see notice in the OFFICIAL GAZETTE of Jun. 26, 1973 (911 O.G. TM 210).
